Favorable Rains in Texas and Unsettled Goods Markets Encourage Pressure.

Friday Afternoon, May 7. Some fine rains fell over night in Tex-as where needed, which helped to offset those which fell eisewhere, so the weather news was not the dominant influence today. It came rather from another direction, apparently finding its foundation in the growing stringency of money and credits and the effects thereof. One of the significant things was a report from New York that a private sale of a large lot of dry goods had been made at a cut of 50 per cent in price. This following on the heels of a statement of big cuts in silk goods seemed to have considerable effect. It was indicative of more resistance to the price level from the consumer and lent hope that perhaps the predicted deset those which fell eisewhere, so the lent hope that perhaps the predicted de-flation in prices is at last about to be witnessed.

July dipped from its early high of 38.60c to 38.15c, while October dropped from 36.83c to 36.13c, but recovery in both came when support was given. Later in the day another wave of selling came, encouraged by disappointing weekly statistics and more details as to weather indicating that a goodly part of the dry section of Texas had received their needed rains, while the other sections were not suffering as badly as some have feared. Final prices were around the lowest for the day, July touching 38.05c and October 35.85c.

The weather map showed that rains were not heavy over the central and enstern belt, while the section of Texas getting too much was not as large as that which benefitted by those received. However, sentiment continued rather favorable to the buill side when based on weather and crop conditions alone.

Sopt news was without particular change, although a report that a lot of cotton was to be shipped to New York from Atlantic ports tended to encourgae a more conservative feeling as the nearby months.

Sales reported for the day were generally small, although in New Orleans they were 1.474 bales, Houston 1.576 and Memphis 1.250. Quotations as a rule were without change.

The weekly figures showed spinners' takings to have been 128.000 bales, compared with 127.000 last year, while movement into sight was 64.000 against 114.000.

In the local market unseld stock increased to 222.000 bales, compared with 58,000 and 127.000.

The decline continued until it amounted to 5 to 31 points, but after July touched 37.99c, the market steadied on complaints from Texas that too much rain was falling in some sections. Trading, With Rails and Textiles Shade Easier

NEW YORK, May 7.—Sentiment among traders was evidently divided at the opening of today's stock market, initial transactions resulting in a mixture of gains and losses. Moderate selling was probably induced by the report of the local reserve bank urging further contraction of credits, Oils, excepting Texas Company, made substantial gains with secondary steels and motors, but rails were irregular with shippings and textiles. Trading was light and again limited to the professional elements. Firmness was shown by foreign exchange in the preliminary quotations.

Trading was dull during the noon hour, except for an irregular spurt of low priced rails. Publication of the wage survey submitted by the railroad labor organizations was without effect on transportation shares. Call money held at opening quotations on light demand.
